

CIRM is the principal international association for marine electronics companies.

Members include manufacturers, suppliers, system integrators, service providers and related businesses. Individual companies are joined together to form our powerful and trusted industry body.

CIRM exists to promote the application of electronic technology to the safety-of-life at sea and efficient conduct of vessels, facilitating productive relationships between all stakeholders concerned with electronic aids to marine navigation, communications and information systems.

CIRM functions

- Promotes the interests of the marine electronics industry on an international basis
- Enables members to participate in the development of international regulations and standards
- Delivers technical/industrial advice to the international regulatory organisations (IMO, ITU, ISO, IEC, etc.)
- Provides a specialist information service for members
- Offers private forums for members to exchange information and business opportunity

Dedicated to our Membership

As a non-profit organization, CIRM works in ‘Consultative Status’ to the IMO with income derived entirely from members’ annual subscriptions.

CIRM is totally dedicated to serving the interests of its membership; encourages participation and provides a solid platform for the promotion of new technology in the interests of safety at sea worldwide.

"I just wanted to say thanks for all your work in making another very successful CIRM conference! I found there was a good balance of speakers and the talks on the more innovative solutions were particularly interesting to me..."

"Even though I'm up to date with standardisation, the technical updates remain very useful. It's good to see the workshops focussed on specific outcomes."

"I know a huge amount of effort goes into delivering such a seamless event, so thanks for everything!"

Simon Cooke, Sperry Marine
